- During the period 5-9 December 1952 unidentified flea-like insects were allegedly found in a wooded area between Grosswasteritz and Rogaesen, west of the city of Brandenburg. These insects were said to have been strewn from a plane by unknown persons, over an area of approximately half a square kilometer. The entire area has been declared off limits and has been cordoned off by "the local fire department".
 - 2. Persons living in the vicinity feel that another potato-bug scare is in the offing. Rumors are current among the inhabitants that this would cause the closing of the air corridors between Berlin and West Germany.
